NOTE

The Small Community Air Service provision of the Airline Deregulation Act of 1978, Section 419(a)(1), defines "eligible point" as any point in the United States to which, on the date of enactment, any air carrier -

- (A) is providing service pursuant to a certificate issued under section 401; or
- (B) is authorized to provide such service, but such service is suspended on the date of enactment.

Section 419(a)(2)(A) requires the Board to determine what essential air service is for each eligible point which on the date of enactment is served by not more than one air carrier holding a 401 certificate. The determination is to be made within one year of enactment.

Section 419(a)(2)(B) provides that for eligible points served by more than one air carrier which thereafter receive service by only one carrier, the Board shall determine what is essential air service within six months of the date the Board is notified that service will be provided by a single carrier.

Section (b)(1)(A) defines "eligible point" to include "any point in the United States which has been deleted from a certificate between July 1, 1968 and October 24, 1978 and which the Board designates."

Whenever the Board determines that essential air service will not be provided to any eligible point without compensation, it may select an applicant to provide essential service for compensation.

Certificated carriers planning to terminate, suspend, or reduce air transportation to any eligible point below the level of essential air service must give 90 days' notice to the Board, State agency and community. Non-certificated carriers not receiving compensation to provide service must serve 30 days' notice.
